Honest and Dishonest Betting Men.

The Commission Agents to be Suppressed by Government-Attempt to Put Down Sporting Advertising-The "Discretionary Investments" Gigantio Frauds-Different Varieties of Betting Advertisers,

LONDON, May 20, 1871. It will be remembered that some two years ago the police of London made a descent on three well known establishments for the transaction of etting business "by commission;" that the agents were tried before the Bow street magistrate, found guilty of a breach of the Betting act and fined £100 ch, and that thereafter a case was submitted to the Court of Oneen's bench with the result that the judgment of the magistrate was confirmed, and the mission business finally suppressed. Had the agents been able to prove that they acted as bona fide agents—that is, that they executed commissions or chents on the turi market, retaining only a percentage for their trouble—they would not have been found guilty; but in point of fact they were princtpais, who laid the bets themselves. The business was an enormous one, amounting to many hundreds of thousands of pounds a year, and showed clearly that there is among the English a deep-coted love of gambling and the means of gratifying it. At time the government seemed to have been seized with an ardent desire for protecting the morals of the people, but there was some ostensible ground for it, the lamentable stories of the Marus of Hastings, the Duke of Newcastle and other nembers of the aristocracy having brought great candal and reproach upon the turf. The feeling that something should be done to put a check on betting resulted in the government action in putting down the commission agencies and in the Jockey interfering with two-year-old running. But with these measures both bodies appeared to be ex-bausted, the public were for the time satisfied, and for two years we have heard nothing of "turf re-The amount of gambling, however, is now of the most deliberate kind, which cries aloud for suppression, and which will certainly, ere long, reuit in strong measures on the part of the government. Of course there is a large quantity of betting which no povernment would dare to touch, such as that which is carried on "at the post"—that is to clubs. The commission agents, who, it must be re-marked, fare an men of strict honor, and invariably cep the ir engagements, were only affected to a lighter tent by the action of the police. They could not re- stabilsh themselves in any part of England without laying themselves open to constant prose-cusion s; nor could they set up in Ireland, for the Simble reason that the fetting act extends to that part of the kingdom. But the Betting act does not extend to Scotland, nor, of course, to foreign parts, and all they had to do was to transier themselves, their clerks and their books to Giesgow and Edinberg, where they have ever since, in the very home of the 'unco gud,' been carrying on a large and increative business, out of which they cannot all the they are the grounds annually. But they are cannot 'had their grounds annually. But they are compelled to alvercase, and thus they december and they are compelled to alvercase, and thus they work done with no strated hand filling columns of the sporting papers with lists of the boads which they are prepared to bet against the horses engaged in the prepared to bet against the horses engaged in the contingency of the papers of

So if to be a millionnaire at present is your aim. Don't heatate, but Join at once our systematic gains." [Shakspeare, revised and improved.]

He then announces "A Safe Investment—Winning a Certainty. Kingsciere Reeing Circular Discretionary investments. Messrs, Eathice & Walter, proprietors (members of the principal West End clubs). Itesuits of late meetings, we gather, were as follows:—Each 210 investor at York was remitted by Friday's post (May 12) x108, net winnings. Each investor of 55 at Doncaster was remitted by Monday's post 2-5, being exclusive of stake and net return after commission give per cent) had ocen deducted." It is unnecessary to say that all these statements are simply lies, and that not one farming was remitted in any case. Messrs, Bailiee & Walter "will continue their highly successful system of Discretionary lavesiments at the Epsom meeting, where they personally attend, and, as such a great influx of distinces is expected during the berby week, they have engaged three extra commissioners to assist them in carrying out the system, and are sangoine of again realizing a gold-achieving victory." There is a sirong inducement to entites them with one's mency on this occasion, for at his meeting last year "eith £25 inyestor was returned £7-3 net winnings. In 1935 each of £25 realized £487; in 1809 each of £25, £324, and in 1870 each of £30, £1, 50,." Messrs, Estitee & Walter "have another Kingcrait—price now attainable, fifty to one—as sure to win the Lerby as easily as Lord Falmount's cold did last senson. We winnessed the spin and are well satisfied with the result; indeed, but training casualities, he cannot be defeated.
